

SUPER KEY IN DBMS

It is a set of one or more attributes (columns) that can uniquely identify a tuple (a row) in a relation (table).

Superset of any candidate key.

A super key becomes a candidate key if it is minimal (i.e. no proper subset of it can uniquely identify a tuple).